

Salt water intrusion

Another problem facing groundwater supplies in New Jersey is salt water intrusion which occurs when excessive amounts of groundwater is withdrawn at times of low rain fall depleting the aquifer. This salt water intrusion means that the water is no longer supporting potable water.

